About the Conference

Higher Education Institutions mostly offer Education to Adult learners. Adult learners have a desire, capacity, intension and requirement to learn because of the importance of learning for one's career. Their learning is focused on trying to find out opportunities that match to their specific career path which is challenging. This requires rethinking a new approach of their learning as Andragogy. Malcom Knowler popularized the concept of Andragogy. This is art and science of helping adults to learn. Andragogical learning is dynamic process and applicable to the needs of higher education students. Therefore, the importance of Andragogy to the students in Higher Education is extremely synergistic with providing students with autonomy in their learning. Hence, the faculty and students must be familiar with this concept.
